At one of the great lard manufacturing estab lishments in Cincinnati, where they "irv out" six hundred bogs a day, the entire animal, crelusive of the hams, is reduced to a grease spot by a remarkable summary process. The factory has seven large circular tanks, of an accurate capacity to hold 90,000 lbs. These tanks receive the entire carcase, burring the hams, and the mass is subjected to a steam process with a pressure of 70 lbs. on the square inch, which dissolves it as completely as the aquafortis bath melted the Veiled Prophet. Every drop of oleageneous juice is squeezed out of the quadruped. and its bones are reduced to powder. The fat is drawn off and the residum used as manure .-The idea of feeding the insatiable tanks with a continuous stream of bogs, just as you would feed the hopper of a mill with corn, has somthing grand and startling in it. One wonders that the percine genus does not run out under the tremendous consumption; for there are upwards of thirty of these factories in Cincinnati alone, and if they use up two hundred hogs per day, for three months in the year, it involves an annual annihilatien of half a million of swine. The sows in hat region must be remarkably prolific. And only think of treating the creatures as the French treat frogs-cutting off their hind legs for the table, and making light of all the rest of the carcase! Awful waste, is it not! We never heard of a rasher proceeding.
